

A Moment With Angel

"I cannot imagine the life sentence you have been dealt." I remember reading these words from a friend after she heard the news of our son being diagnosed with Autism.

It has been a year since we received the news. Days, weeks and hours of therapy have passed by. I can honestly stand back and tell you that I can think of no greater life sentence than being Joshua's mommy. The Lord has worked through Joshua to open my eyes to His (the Lord's) world and how He is moving to help me have a stronger relationship with Him.

I have watched our son look at the smallest detail of things to find something of worth.

It has been through watching Joshua, that God has taught me to look at the smallest details of life and see something of worth, something that needs refining within my own life.

I know that I am not alone. As humans we get older and lose our sense of detail. WE over look what is really important as we press on with life. So, what is it that is really important? Our relationship with God. We have lost our identity over generations of time to the point that we don't recognize the true intimacy that we are lacking. The understanding and coming to know who we really are in Christ.

My prayer is that this short book of details seen through the eyes of one woman, would lead others into a relationship with God that is truly intimate.

"You're blessed when you get your inside world--your mind and heart--put right. Then you can see God in the outside world." ~ Matthew 5:8 (The Message)
